

Part Four

Mrs. Red is putting herself and others at risk for foodborne illness. Since she has been sick, washing her hands with soap and water after using the bathroom is extremely important. Without washing her hands with both soap and water, she could potentially pass harmful bacteria and viruses to others at the farm, and even to her own family.

Mrs. Red should have told an employee if the bathroom facilities were missing something, such as soap or paper towels, or if they were not working properly.
